

Rutland Historical Society Quarterly
Vol. 40 No. 2
The Vermont Marble Company Stores

Written by Mary Fergosi in 2010, this article “The Vermont Marble Company Stores” discusses the history of the marble company in Proctor and the stores that accompanied it in Proctor, West Rutland, Rutland, and Florence. This quarterly discusses such natural disasters as fires and floods that caused some stores to close. Financial problems were also a major cause of the downfall of some stores, as Fergosi explains. This article goes into intricate detail on the reasons for these stores and why they were a success in the late 1800s through the early 1900s.