

Rutland Historical Society Quarterly
Volume IX No. 1
Rutland California Company

This quarterly discusses the relationship between Costa Mesa, California, and Rutland, Vermont. In the year 1849, a group of Rutland, Vermont, natives set off on a cross-country journey to California. The group of people were known as the Rutland California Company. The group had a constitution and by-laws, which were strictly followed and administered by the members of the company. Included in this quarterly is the full constitution that the company followed. This issue then jumps ahead 130 years to 1979, and documents the trip of a few professors from California to Vermont. The professors even brought a gift to Vermont. If you are interested in the long relationship between California and Vermont, then this is a must read!
