Vol. XVIII, No. 4

Lewellyn J. Egelston

This issue explores the family and political life of Lewellyn J. Egelston, a Republican chairman of Rutland county. It explains that he was an advocate of the Rutland Business School and would rise to be president of the New England Business College Association. There is a collection of newspaper clippings from the Rutland Herald that are included from a scrapbook that was given to the historical society. The newspaper articles span the years 1913 to 1944 and include topics that interested the family, such as politics and local events. The issue also includes pictures of the Egelston family from the 1890s-1920s.
