Antique Trucks A Different Kind of Horse-Power

In this quarterly, entitled "Antique Trucks," by David G. Zsido. The author looks at the history of trucks in and around Rutland and Vermont. The article starts with a look at early trucks, known as "high wheelers," and the "C" cab-style trucks. The author then goes into the story of Jack Grace who might have been the first Vermonter to operate a Mack Truck in 1919. Zsido then looks at off-road construction trucks such as the Linn Truck of 1917. The author then gives a biography of Arthur Franklin Ward, who founded the first motor company in Rutland. He then moves on to the national organizations trying to help preserve the remaining antique trucks in America. The article finishes with a letter to the author giving him information on different trucks discussed in the article.
