History of CVPS

The cover illustrates CVPS's (Central Vermont Public Service Corporation) earliest efforts using wind turbines as alternative energy, and acts as an introduction to the history of the company.

Opening with a detailed biography of one of the earliest pioneers of the company, William S. Barstow, it next leads into a discussion of the company's continued growth led by 'Bert' Cree.

An article by Colin Nickerson follows, marking the 50th anniversary of the company under the leadership of James Griffin, President. It relates his concerns about new power sources and is accompanied by a yearly time line describing the Company's evolution.

Numerous pictures of workers, and installations enliven the text.
