Clarendon & Pittsford Railroad

A cover map of the Clarendon & Pittsford Railroad serves as an introduction to the individuals that helped create it, and the many occasions that marked its progress.

Written by Thomas B. McDevitt and Michael L. Austin in 1961, the article features a portrait of Redfield Proctor the “founding father” of the Railroad, followed by detailed information of its uses and major events during its operation.

Photographs of special events and a multitude of engines with an addition of an excellent Bibliography make this a valuable asset of Rutland’s history.
