

Rutland Historical Society Quarterly

Vol.45, No.3, 2015

Rutland in the Civil War -The Final Chapter

“Rutland in the Civil War-The Final Chapter” is the sixth and final episode of Robert Ranftle’s review of the Civil War and its impact on the Community.

The end of the war and Lee’s surrender brought numerous celebrations by way of torch light processions and bonfires, until fifteen days later the Death of President Lincoln produced a nation in mourning.

With a brief review of Rutland prior to the war, Mr. Ranftle’s considers numerous aspects of life both during and after the war in remarkable detail, with a section of photographs to accompany the text.

An outstanding series that brings the War and its impact to life, leading to a greater understanding of both local and national issues.