DEDICATION

DEDICATION

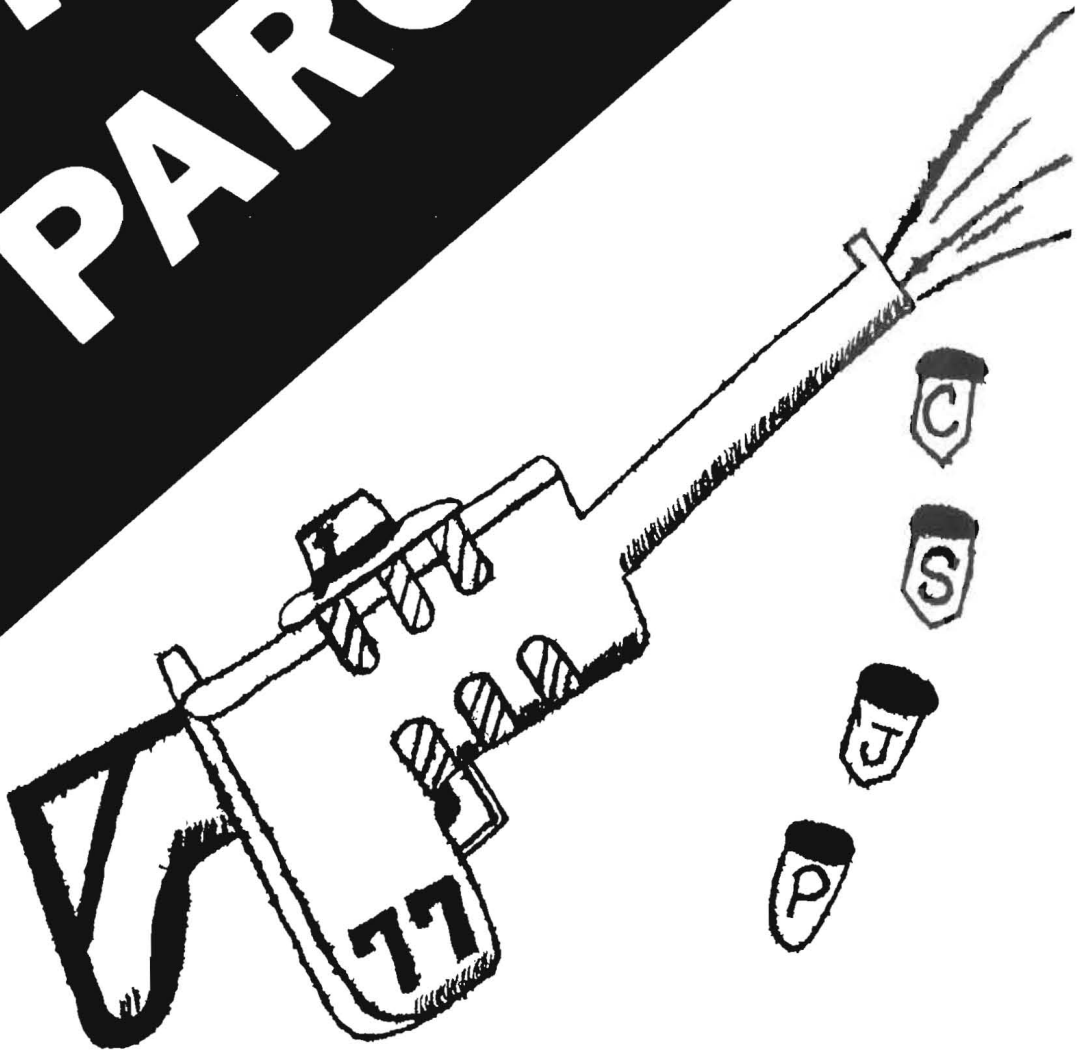

On May 22, 1977, at exactly 1:00 p.m., we are being paroled on good behavior. We will not permit ourselves to leave without mentioning the one person we all could turn to when the heat was on. ("I don't believe it; we have two tests on Monday! Marty, load 'em up again, will ya?")

When we needed a place to lie low for a while, he always welcomed us into his place. We always had enough to eat, and never had to worry about dehydrating—he saw to that. ("Marty, load 'em up again, will ya?")

And, if we needed somebody to bail us out, he was always the first to approach the bench. ("What do you mean? Of course we need a padded room! Marty, load 'em up again, will ya?")

So, Marty "The Muck" McClallen, we dedicate this literary masterpiece of the underground, to you—our man behind the scenes.

UP FOR PAROLE

LAMPLIGHTER

You'll enter in where few have dared
To light the lives of those uncared.
The darkened plain of apathy
Shall yield a path that they can see.
Confusion will be swept aside,
Your radiance their way provide.
Seek out and cleave the gloom apart;
Illuminate the lonely heart.
Each life you touch a spark bestow
To kindle there the joy you know.
Dispel the darkness of their night
In bearing them a friendly light;
That on the battlefield of life
Shall bring them safely through the strife;
Shall gently lead the route they trace
Unto a harbor's warm embrace.
O beacon on the stormy sea -
That you may shine eternally.
